And be it further enacted, That in case of the prevalence of a contagious or epidemic disease at the seat of government, it shall be lawful for the President of the United States to permit and direct the removal of any or all the public offices to such other place or places as, in his discretion, shall be deemed most safe and convenient for conducting the public business.

Sec. 7. And be it further enacted, That whenever, in the opinion of the chief justice, or in case of his death, or inability, of the senior associate justice of the supreme court of the United States, a contagious sickness shall render it hazardous to hold the next stated session of the said court at the seat of government, it shall be lawful for the chief or such associate justice, to issue his order to the marshal of the district within which the supreme court is by law to be holden, directing him to adjourn the said session of the said court to such other place within the same, or an adjoining district, as he may deem convenient; and the said marshal shall thereupon adjourn the said court, by making publication thereof in one or more public papers printed at the place by law appointed for holding the same, from the time he shall receive such order, until the time by law preferred for commencing the said session. And the district judges shall, respectively, under the same circumstances, have the same power, by the same means, to direct adjournments of the district and circuit courts within their several districts, to some convenient place within the same, respectively.

NEWBURYPORT, March 5.

THE MERRIMACK.

Capt. Hoyt, concurs with letters from officers on board the Merrimack, in giving the most flattering accounts of that excellent vessel. She is universally allowed in the West Indies to be the most beautiful ship in the American navy. Commodore Barry acknowledges her to be the handsomest vessel he ever saw. She sails remarkably fast, one letter says, "We see nothing but what we can either speak or leave." A ship, Captain Roberts, sailed from Boston harbour the same day with us, and had got out a league before we hove up; we soon were up with her under our topmasts, and although she put on every rag of sail, we were obliged to tattle our topmasts to the caps to keep her company. In a very severe gale in lat. 34, we scudded 11 knots under bare poles. It reflects the highest honor on the subscribers, contractors, and architect, to have furnished, on loan, the first and best vessel of her size, at a much less expense than any other built by the government. The officers and crew were in excellent health and spirits.

BOSTON, March 8.

On Wednesday night last, two children of Mr. Jacob Porter's, the master of a boarding house in Royal-Exchange Lane, were poisoned with crude opium. One was about 7 years of age, the other about 5. The father, and a woman who lived in the house, were yesterday committed to separate apartments in the prison. A Coroner's Inquest was called, and several Physicians of the town assisted in the examination of the bodies—after sitting a considerable time they agreed in the verdict, That the children came to their death by certain poisonous substances received into their stomachs, and administered by Jacob Porter, and Abigail, whom he calls his wife, the reputed parents of the children.

NEW-YORK, March 15.

The citizens were highly delighted yesterday, when they received the enlivening salutation from the ship Sanfom, as she approached the harbour. She sailed from Madras on the 16th of October, under convoy, and in company with the following English Indiamen, viz.

Lord Camden (Com. Ship) Dover Castle, Henry Dundas, Good Hope, Buxbridge, and Veruna; with the Mount Vernon, for Baltimore—They all arrived off the Cape of Good Hope on New Year's day—at St. Helena the 16th Jan.—from whence the Sanfom and Mount Vernon sailed the 20th. On account of westerly winds the Mount Vernon did not expect to arrive as soon as the Sanfom.

A gentleman on board the Sanfom informs us, that in consequence of the manoeuvres of Tippoo Saib, the English had ordered out an army of observation of 20,000 men.

He also informs us of the capture of two English Indiamen (the Raymond and Woodcock) on the coast of Malabar. The captain of the Raymond was killed in the action.

It is thirteen months since the Sanfom left this port; and we are happy to observe, there is every prospect of her having made a productive voyage.

Yesterday arrived here from Jamaica, the Snow Chatham, Stanwood. On the 26th of February, off Cape Antonio, at 7 A. M. saw a sail—at half past 7, saw two schooners. The first vessel appeared to be the Lucretia, Welsh, of Boston, from Kingston, bound to Norfolk, the other a French privateer. The Lucretia, unarmed, sent 4 men on board the Chatham, in order to defend both vessels. Having got the men on board, cleared for action, which commenced at half past ten, and continued for three glasses—during the engagement, the privateer kept in shoal water, which gave her an advantage over the Chatham. The Lucretia, being a heavy sailer, fell astern to the windward, which enabled the privateer to cut her off.

The privateer, having boarded her prize, immediately after made sail for the Chatham to renew the action, with her bloody flag flying; which was renewed at half past 12, and continued for three glasses more, during which time they had reason to believe, from the confusion, considerable slaughter was made on board the privateer, they having sprung up a dead man to the yard arm, as a signal of their fate, had they fallen into their hands. After the engagement, the privateer steered off, and would have been pursued, had not Captain Stanwood expended almost all his ammunition. The next day spoke the brig Polly, West, of Providence, who was detained four days by said privateer—having no cargo, was discharged. He informed us she was from the Havanna, and that her force was four frigates, and one 24 pounder mounted on a swivel in the hatchway, and 75 men. The Chatham had six frigates, and 17 men, none of whom were in the least injured; and all the damage the vessel received, was the shattering of her boarding spar over the stern, and a shot or two through the sails.

Dr. Johnson's account of the republicanism of Milton, though perhaps exaggerated with respect to the political principles of that inviolable poet, may be justly applied to the pure republicanism of the present day. "It is founded in an envious hatred of greatness, and a full desire of independence; in petulance impatient of control, and pride diffident of superiority. Its predominant desire is to destroy rather than to establish, not feeling so much the love of liberty, as repugnance to authority."

"We are, at present, in a perilous state, and it is to be feared, on the brink of some calamity. Menaced with the resentment of a foreign nation, we are distracted among ourselves. In proportion to our dissensions will be our danger, and our safety lies in love to our constitution, and confidence in our administration. If the people will cordially unite in supporting active measures of the administration, France will change her tone from resentment to complacency. But experience of her conduct towards all other nations must convince us, that it is her means only, and not her object, that she will change. Her object will remain the same, to reduce us to a subjection to her will. Let us beware, therefore, of supposing, that when she speaks peace she means peace. She will speak peace while we support our administration; and again war, whenever she can persuade our people to oppose the administration of their government. Divide and subdue is her maxim."

SOME ACCOUNT OF A MANUSCRIPT,

ENTITLED,

"TALLEYRAND'S DESCENT INTO HELL."

TALLEYRAND now discovered many of his old co-mates, whose villages were not totally obliterated. Robespierre, Danton, Carnot, Brissot, Marat, Condorcet, and the Orator of the human race, were among the number. The distinction of Cordelier and Jacobin, appeared to be altogether forgotten; those ties, which on earth bound some of them together in one deadly interest, were broken; and each perturbed spirit became a Fury of vengeance to his brother. But amid this throng of Republicans and Philosophers, he looked in vain for Mirabeau, and ventured, in a tremulous voice, to ask his guide in what manner his earliest and dearest associate was disposed of. For him, replied the ghost, has been reserved a deeper and heavier perdition. He is now suffering in the hidden cells of anguish, the very sight of which would stiffen all thy joints with horror. In the entrails of yonder rock, which rises from that ocean of liquid fire whose waves never sleep, is the home, the last dreadful home of Mirabeau—Mirabeau, whose sacrilegious purposes were conceived in darkness, and brought forth in blood: whose crimes were more numerous than the fiends which surround thee, more remorseless than the bosom of Alecto: whose corrupt heart rotted in its own impurity; who died blaspheming; and, to honor whose presidential remains, the ashes of a virgin Saint were torn from their hallowed rest, and scattered to the winds of Heaven. Nor is Mirabeau a solitary sufferer: Voltaire and all those whose bodies pollute the holy shrine of St. Genevieve, with the apostate Priests and Bishops, are thus racked on the excruciating wheel of hopeless Despair.

After a momentary silence, the mingling yells of varied torture burst from their confinement; a black whirlwind swept along the gulph; and the fatal orb moved from its station. As it gradually descended, Talleyrand followed it with his eyes till it was lost in total darkness. The gates, self-moving, now closed the terrific scene, and left the Minister to ruminate on the wonders of the place, as his guide conducted him, silently, towards the Palace of Pluto. They soon arrived in sight of those delightful fields where the spirits of the great and good repose in endless felicity. When come to the residence of the Prince of Darkness, Egalité was dismissed, and Talleyrand was delivered over to the shade of Dulau, the unfortunate Archbishop of Arles. Different, indeed, were the objects of Talleyrand's contemplation, as he passed along the flowery banks of Elysium, from those he had witnessed on the borders of Phlegethon. Pure rills gushing from their rose-fringed fountains, "on orient pearls and sands of gold", bubbled along in mazy wantonness; thousands of cool and pleasant arbours rose, in blooming tufts, on every side.—Not a grove but had some new and captivating beauty;—not a mead but was impurpled with the violet, or flushed with the carnation.—The voice of extacy warbled from every bush; the smile of celestial joy glittered on every countenance.—"The scene shone bright with bliss"; and every thing seemed to give evidence that it was the "Place

"Where mischiefs never fly, cares never come With wrinkled brow, nor anguish, nor dis ease, Nor malice forked tongued."

As our author, in this part of his performance, is rather interesting, it is with pleasure we lay it before our readers. It may be considered as no unfavorable specimen of his serious poetry.

"There rises no storm; the sun diffuses there His temper'd beams thro' skies forever fair; There gentler airs o'er brakes of myrtle blow; Hills greener rise, and purer waters flow. There bud the woodbine and the jessamine pale; With every bloom that scents the morning gale; While thousand melting sounds the breezes bear, In silken dalliance, to the dreaming ear, And golden fruits, mid shadowy blossoms, shine In fields immortal, and in groves divine. As onward thro' the joyful plains he goes, Th' apostate priest no touch of comfort knows. The fight of haunted souls in pleasure laid, By every stream; and blest in every shade, Joys which his guilty ghost must never share, His spirit plunged in comfortless despair. E'en then when mem'ry shew'd his every sin, When all was darkness and remorse within, His martyr guide directs his trembling eyes To where his monarch's peaceful refuge lies; Were, in the centre of a blooming wood, Immortal Louis rests, the mild and good. A crown he wore by angel fingers made; Around his head celestial glories play'd; In wreathes of light his radiant limbs were dress'd, And transport harbour'd in his holy breast. Close by his side, in beauty's pride, was seen, His life's last thought, his gentle, faithful Queen. In bowers of bliss, like the first pair, they play, Or hand in hand, pursue their flow'ry way. A fight like this, to keener pangs consign'd The quivering texture of his blasted mind, When thus his guide: "Behold that lovely pair Whose lives were faultless as their lot is fair; Whose innocent blood, by ruffian hands, was shed, Who call'd no curses on their murderer's head: These were thy lov'd reigns, Priest; the blood of these

No charms can silence, and no prayers appease. It mounts, like incense, to th' eternal throne, And brings the judgments of th' Almighty down. Quick flies the time, the rapid hours advance That wing the dreadful destiny of France. Her race, her horrid race of crime is run Beneath th' horizon sinks her bloody fun;—The cloud built turrets of her pride decay; Their evening crimson fades in gloom away; Fierce portents blaze, and to the world declare The last sad night of Anarch's fell career.—"The time has been, 'ere scribbling knaves began

To claim more rights than God design'd for man, To teach mankind that passion never strays, That human nature's just in all her ways, That Christian laws are ludicrously nice, And sweet, oh! sweet! the downy bed of vice: Ere convict Thieves, at their own fate amazed, Were from the gallows to the Pulpit raised; Ere, in the face of guilt-annoying day, The mother play'd to shew her child the way; Ere the son pluck'd the hoary father's beard; Ere beggars reign'd and beggars' trulls were fear'd;

While Paris, yet, could plead her virtuous ten, And prayers sincere were mutter'd now and then, The time has been that gave the rustic throng Their evening ballet, and their morning song. E'en Paris, then, her harmless joys could boast; Who was most upright, then, was honor'd most; And no vile blot on our grateful cheeks o'erspread. To ask a blessing on our Monarch's head.

In those good days, it was not strange to bend With cordial friendship o'er a bleeding friend; To see a foe in cruellest anguish lay And smooth his pillow as he pail'd away.

Then want was furnish'd with the means to live, For men had hearts to feel and hands to give; Then wealth dispensed what happiness it could, To taste the luxury of doing good: Then beauty wept at sympathy's command, And love was then no stranger in the land. Tell me, false Autun, what has France obtain'd In lieu of these; what great advantage gain'd With all your new illumination fired, With liesce blest'd, with sacrifice inspired, With venerable piles in ruin laid, By village tales the wood-god's dwellings made, With all the Hamlet's sweet delights o'erthrown With flocks undone, and pious pastors flown, With knaves carousing where the poor were fed, With ev'ry gen'rous, social virtue dead, With all these blessings added to your store, Say are you better, happier than before.

We are sorry the extent of our plan will not suffer us to give the whole of this passage; but we will select from it that part which particularly refers to America. After Talleyrand became assured of the final triumph of Great Britain, and of the restoration of monarchy in France, he was solicitous to know in what manner the difference with America would terminate; as he had still hopes of getting a crop from her, before he should be obliged to resign the task, of renting out the globe to other hands. It was true, she had been kicked and bruised with too little ceremony, and it was said she was preparing to kick in her turn; but this report seemed, to Talleyrand, rather problematical, inasmuch as she had been cuffed for many years without resentment, complaint, or even a murmur. He, however, wished to know, if her back was, absolutely, up, whether a little affected humiliation, and fellow for the past, would not happily restore him once more to her confidence. Dulau answers:

Go, more than demon, go resume thy arts, Go plead repentance, and a contrite heart; Go let affection glitter thro' a tear; Go proffer peace,—the peaceful land will hear. While fordid commerce hugs her mangled trade; While public fame a slave to gold is made; While thefts and insults only touch the breast With grief for some, and hope to save the rest, Tho' but two fractions of the whole remain, Who pleads for peace will never plead in vain. Go, for Columbia waits, with anxious eyes, To see thee smile; an easy willing prize. The gates of Janus there are ever barr'd; Thou' ture to triumph, though thy terms are hard. And when the flattering league of friendship's made,

When every little fear in peace is laid; When, wrapp'd in specious rest, they bless their lot. The future fair, and all the past forgot, Then cut the mounds of faction's lawless flood, And drench another land in tears and blood. Infatuate men, ah! what avails your boast, Your rising Navy, and your guarded coast, Your hosts of patriot youth in arms array'd, 'Tis all, the wretched shadow of a shade. For soon the spoiler comes "with wanton wiles, With quips, and cranks, and nods, and wreath'd smiles;"

Disarms your vengeance, slays the lifted blow And lay's your freedom and your honor low. So the poor girl, whose bold seducer flies With steps, too rude, to seize the virgin prize, Frowns on the wretch who dar'd invade her charms,

And all her injur'd feelings rush to arms. But soon return'd, he drops an artful tear, And pours his plaintive sorrows in her ear, Till treacherous love admits the wily cheat, And stamps her ruin and her shame complete. So Satan, once with "diplomatic skill," Rush'd through the tangles of the sacred hill,

Beguil'd the truth of Adam's honest mind, And nail'd the yoke of mischief on mankind. Infatuate men! while clouds invest the air, You fondly dream, to morrow will be fair. Still careless on the same dull road you stray, Nor heed the stormy dangers of the way. With you the frolic and the feast is found, The Chariot rattles and the glass goes round. You still can truck your wares, and go to bed With some new speculation in your head; Still strut the 'Change with Haberdasher pride; Still count the profits, and the gain divide; Still take the breakfast paper, and explore The advertising columns o'er and o'er;

And, if the tale should meet your listless glance Of some new land a prey to bloody France, You still can look at home, with vast content, And underwrite the state for one per cent.

Such was the prophetic spirit of our author when engaged in this truly curious little work. But what can we say of his predictions: Are they not the offspring of a sickly imagination brooding over its own misfortunes? Meteors of a stagnant mind; the victim of a sedentary life? Surely, surely, America, after her long suffering, is not at last to be dragged into the vortex of revolutionary misery. And yet—

The fire at Norfolk, it appears, was occasioned by the wilful act of some incendiary for the mayor of the town has offered a reward of five hundred dollars, for apprehending the person or persons who set fire to it.

A melancholy accident happened on Wednesday morning last, whereby a negro man was instantaneously killed.—The circumstances as far as we can learn are, that a boy having laid hands on his master's pistols, which were loaded, carried them into an apartment where the negro man and a mulatto woman were employed in domestic affairs; the man jocosely told the woman to take one, retreat to a proper distance, and fire—he did so, when the ball entered the man's head and put an end to his existence—they both fired at the same time, but the woman received no injury. The above circumstance should operate as a warning to all persons who have occasion to carry like weapons, not to suffer them to be exposed to the curiosity of children and servants, whose little knowledge of them, frequently produce disastrous effects.

On Saturday was launched from Messrs. Steel and Lamin's ship yard, Fell's Point, an elegant brig, named Mary-Ann-Eliza, 200 tons burthen, and pierced for sixteen guns.

Building and Garden Lots,

CONTIGUOUS to, and at a small distance from the city, to be sold at the coffee house in Second street, on Wednesday the 20th of March, at 6 o'clock in the evening, containing from about 1-4 of an acre to about 2 acres each. The small lots fronting on Vine and Callowhill streets, on the west side of Schuylkill Second street, and the large lots containing whole or half or quarter squares, some of them bounded on the west by Schuylkill and the upper ferry road including some fine quarry lots on Schuylkill: the whole containing about 240 acres, and formerly known by the name of Springbury; bounded on the north by Francis street, extending from the Ridge road to Schuylkill, crossing the canal, on which several of the lots will give fronts.

The situation of many of the large lots is on high ground, commanding beautiful views of the Schuylkill, supposed to be sufficiently detached to escape any unfortunate delirium which may be prevalent in the city.—The terms will be made known at the time of the sale.

N. B. Maps of the lots are fixed up at the middle and upper ferries on Schuylkill; at Seybert's Tavern, in Second street, Northern Liberties; at Ogden's tavern in Chestnut street, and at the coffee house.

The convenience of those for near the premises will prove very advantageous to purchasers.
